

Proposed "new look" mural for Lane End Beach Bembridge

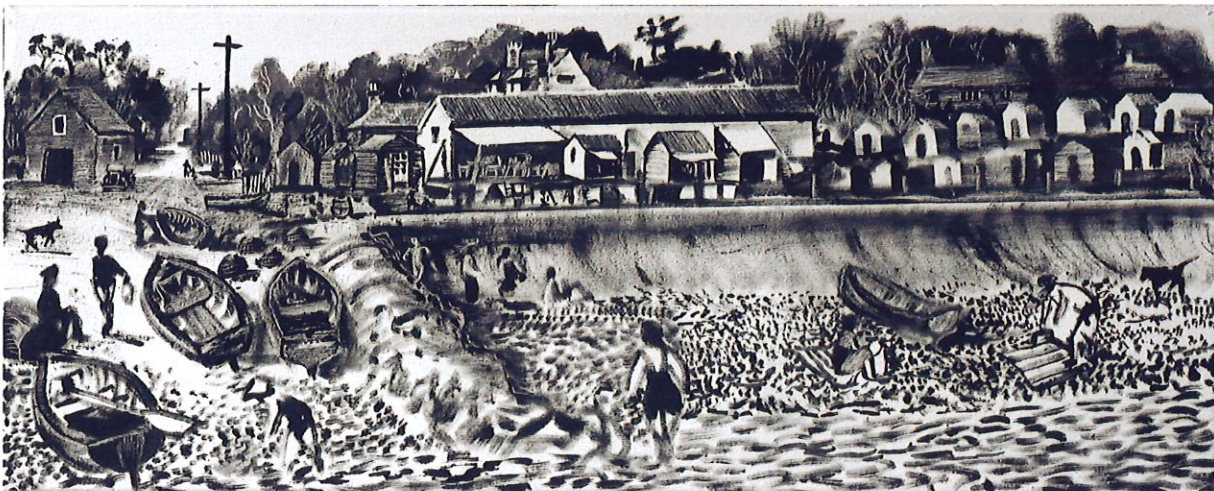

Existing, Verena Sparrow's original mural which has been subject to weather and has been damaged.

1940s photograph of Lane End beach

First sketch based on old photograph

Suggested design solution for a more permanent mural.

Using a Bitumen paint a mural could be made using two pigments, white and black. Bitumen is weather resistant and will stand up to years of beach weather without fading.

The subject is taken from a vintage photograph of the original Lifeboat Cafe

The method

The wall to be cleaned and prepared for a coat of white weatherproof paint.

Using the original image as a template it would be enlarged by squaring up to provide a guide for the painting.

The costing would be based on the prep work having been carried out, ie the wall would be freshly painted white.

Artist's costs

materials approximately £250.00

professional fee and artist's donation - subject to Parish Council budget.
